THE NEEDHAM
Musical Cabinet

THIS new and wonderful instrument enables any one, whether understanding music or not, to play any desired melody or harmony, sacred or secular, from the most plaintive dirge to the most lively dance music. It possesses a mechanism of marvelous simplicity, requiring but the intelligence of a child to manipulate, yet capable of reproducing, without limitation, the musical compositions of the past, present and future. The execution is faultless, strict in melody, harmony and rhythm, and the instrument is eminently adapted for Sunday Schools, prayer and revival meetings, home devotional exercises, and in all cases where good, correct music is required, and no musician is at hand to perform. THE CHRONICLE

WEEP FOREVER, WHY?

O woe, why weep forever,
As one who weeps an endless wrong?
What hidden woe can be so deep?
What utter grief can last so long?
The Spring makes haste with step and stride
Your life and beauty to renew;
She even bids the roses wait,
And gives her first and best care to you.
The welcome rind folds his wing,
To pour for you his freshest strain;
To you the ear of bluebirds sing,
Till all your life seems thrill again.
The sparrow chirps his wedding song,
And trusts his tender brood to you;
Fair daffodils the Summer long
With clasp and kiss your beauty woo.
The sunbeams dip your limbs with light
The rain breaks diamonds in your hair;
The breeze makes love to you at night,
Yet still you droop and still despair.
Beneath your brows, at fall of dew,
By lovers' lips is softly told
The tale that all the ages through
Has kept the world from growing old.
But still, though April's buds unfold,
Or Summer sets the earth ablaze,
Or Autumn pranks your robes with gold,
You away and sigh in graceful grief.
Mourn on forever, unconsoled,
And keep your secret faithful true;
No heart in all the world can hold
A sweeter grace than constancy.

THROUGH A WINDOW.

I lie here at rest in my chamber,
And look through the window again,
With eyes that are changed since the old time,
And the sting of an exquisite pain.
'Tis not much I see for a picture,
Through boughs that are green with Spring,
A barn with its roof gray and mossy,
And above it a bird on the wing.
Or, lifting my head a thought higher,
Some hill and a village I know;
And over it all the blue heaven,
With a white cloud floating below.
Ah! once the roof was a prison,
My mind and the sky were free;
My thoughts with the birds went flying,
And my hopes were a heaven to me.
Now I come from the limitless distance
Where I followed my youth's wild will,
Where they press the wine of delusion,
That you drink and are thirsty still.
And I know why the bird with the spring-time
To the garden old tree comes back;
He has tried the South and the Summer,
He has felt what the sweet things lack.
So I come with a sad contentment,
With eyes that are changed, I see;
The roof means peace, not a prison,
And heaven smiles down on me.

A Portland paper gives this as a proof of the force of imagination: "The owner of a standard thermometer, on Exchange street, etherized the mercury to-day, reducing it to temperate. Men came along peering at every pore, with fans spread and umbrellas raised, and when they saw the indications, lowered the umbrellas, folded their fans and remarked how quickly they felt the sea breeze."

A young man in the country, who has to work there, writes: "I have just returned from harvesting wheat—the golden wheat! that some say writes such glowing pictures about—and 'eating golden butter,' and all that stuff. If I had that man by the windpipe I would choke him. My fingers are blistered and my face is burned. I work sixteen hours a day and get one dollar."

Col. Walter S. Church, of Albany, N. Y., is at last undisputed successor of the Van Rensselaer barons. A deed filed the other day in the Albany county Clerk's office from James Kirt and the estate of Peter Caggar as trustee, to Col. Church, marks the end, according to the Argus, of anti-rentism in that vicinity, and of all the troubles incident thereto for forty years past.

In the commencement exercises of the western female high school, in Baltimore, the Rev. Dr. Wilson prayed: "Oh, God, grant that not one of these young ladies may be the victim of unrequited love."

Lord Kinsale is the only peer who can remain in the presence of the British Sovereign with his head covered on occasions of state. The privilege was conferred by King John in the thirteenth century.

Migrating birds go in a direct line from north to south, and never take their course from east to west or west to east.

Wink at small injuries rather than avenge them. If, to destroy a single bee, you throw down the hive, instead of an enemy, you have a thousand.

In England the Queen only can drive eight horses on state occasions. There is no objection, if you wish, to seven horses and a mule.

Violet Ink.

In 1871, 1872 and 1873, two young men (twin brothers), Franchmen, were often met in different parts of France and England, dressed alike, and by closely watching them they were seen to enter counting houses, banks, insurance offices, green grocers, merchants, and stores of every kind. They carried no luggage or large sample cases, like commercial travelers or duffers. These two young men were the celebrated brothers that made clear, in three years, between them, over £100,000 sterling, without one cent of capital to start with. In 1870 they made the discovery of a very rich violet writing ink. They put it up in bottles, and sold it for 2s. English currency. But they were very poor, and could not advertise or commission it, and they struggled hard, but could not get ahead. They walked from shop to shop every day, occasionally selling a bottle. One dark, bleak Saturday night, in the city of Paris, out of money, footsore, disheartened and hungry, they entered a cafe to trade a bottle of their violet ink (if they could) for their supper. The cafe proprietor tested their great discovery and was amazed. He offered them five francs to teach him their secret, so that he could make his own ink and never have to buy any more. The brothers faltered. It was hunger on one side and parting with their secret on the other. They decided to accept the Frenchman's paltry five francs piece and make the violet ink in his presence. They then determined to sell that secret to all France and England. The five francs carried them over till Monday morning. From that day fortune never failed them. They each took a pint bottle of the violet ink in their pockets, and visited stores, banks, offices, and everywhere that ink is used or sold. They asked a moment's time of the store-keeper to show him their writing done with this ink. Then they told him he could make that ink for a trifle per gallon. He could sell it in his store or use it for his own business purposes. Five francs was to give the secret. They found hundreds of thousands ready to buy. Their fortune was made. Three years they worked selling this secret in this way. Very many days they made 500f. and 600f., and in England they were known to make even more than that sum in a single day. They retired in the fall of 1873 worth over half a million dollars, every dollar of which was made selling the secret for making their elegant violet ink. —St. Louis Republic.

A HORSE'S SENSES OF SMELL.—An African pony, unlike Job's was horse, "smellth" not "the battle war off," but he will smell a poisonous snake at a sufficient distance to avoid him. An English gentleman was leading his pony one day in South Africa, when he saw his Kaffir servant suddenly jump on one side. Knowing that it was a snake that had alarmed him, the gentleman dropped his reins and went forward to kill it. It was a puff adder, the reptile which, if thought, Cleopatra used to commit suicide. Killing it with a stone, he examined its glands and found them filled with poison. On returning to the pony and advancing his hand to take the reins, the horse shied back in great alarm. For several minutes he would not allow his master to approach. Some of the order of the adder had attached itself to the gentleman's hands and the cautious animal, being warned by his sense of smell was afraid that there was danger even in his master's touch. The horse's nose is, as every boy who has trained a colt knows, one of his means of gaining knowledge. If a horse is afraid of an object the best way to remove his fear is to let him smell of it.

A Maine schooner while fishing off the banks of Newfoundland, with some two hundred fathoms of cable out and sails clewed, was suddenly found to be under headway. It was soon discovered that a huge whale of the finback species had got his tail entangled in the cable and was hauling the craft at the rate of fifteen knots an hour, and growing more and more excited was keeping his course to the sea. The whale finally tore away by breaking the cable.

Gov. Wade Hampton, it is said, would rather hunt or fish than make a political speech, and yet a South Carolina darkey says of him: "Fo' de Lawd! but every time dat man opens his mouf I feels dat I am turnin' whiter an' gittin' de kinks out o' my ha'r."

Of course miners are crazy when they lose their mines.

The Four Queer Companions.

Gibber, the actor and dramatist, in company with three friends, once made an excursion. He had a false set of teeth; one of his friends a glass eye; a second friend a cork leg; but the third had nothing particular, except a remarkable way of shaking his head. They traveled in a post-coach; and while at the first stage, after each had made merry with his neighbor's infirmity, they agreed that at every halting place they would all affect the same singularity. When they came to breakfast, they all quivered; and, as the countrymen stood gaping round when they alighted: "O! rot it!" cried one, "how that man squints!" "Why," said a second, "here be another squinting fellow!" The third was thought to be a better squinter than the other two, and the fourth better than all the rest. In short, language cannot express how admirably they all quivered; for they went one degree beyond the superlative. At dinner they appeared to have cork legs, and their stumping about made more diversion than at breakfast. At tea they were all deaf, but at supper, which was at the Ship, at Dover, each man resumed his character, the better to play his part in a farce they had concerted among them. When they were ready to go to bed, Gibber called out to the waiter: "Here, you fellow, take out my teeth!" "Teeth, sir?" said the man. "Ay, teeth, sir! Unscrow that wire, and they'll all come out together." After some hesitation, the man did as he was ordered. Then another called out: "Here, you, take out my eye!" "Lor, sir!" said the waiter, your eye? "Yes, my eye!—Come here you stupid dog! Pull up that eyelid, and it will come out as easily as possible." This done, the third cried out: "Here, you rascal, take off my leg!" The waiter did with less reluctance having been before apprised that it would be his last job. He was, however, mistaken. The fourth watched his opportunity, and while the frightened waiter was surveying with rueful countenance, the eye, teeth and leg lying on the table, cried out in a frightful, hollow voice: "Come here, sir—take off my head!" Turning round, and seeing the man's head shaking like that of a mandarin upon a chimney piece, he darted out of the room, and after tumbling headlong down stairs ran about the house swearing that the gentlemen above stairs were certainly all devils.

RAILWAY MAPS.—Did you ever notice how remarkably the railway maps of the United States seem to conform themselves to the interest of the particular companies issuing them? No matter what a railway route is, on its own map it goes in almost a straight line from one terminus to the other; while the States and cities and mountains and rivers through and along which it passes are whirled into place accordingly, as the leaves and dust are whirled, hit and thither by the rush of a moving train. Add then what a breadth of prominence attaches to this great thoroughfare, in contrast with the attenuated and crooked roads which creep along on either side of it. If you consult a map of the principal competing routes, you will find all this changed. The new road has there all the breadth and directness, while the other has dwindled and twisted until it seems as insignificant and crooked as a Virginia rail fence; and meantime the entire face of the country has adapted itself to the new railway exigencies.

A DISASTERED HOUSE.—A singular story is told of a deserted house near Haverhill, Massachusetts. Twelve years ago an energetic young mechanic was engaged to marry a young woman of that city, and worked hard to lay up money to buy a home to which to take his bride. One morning he invited her to take a drive to a handsome and well furnished house in the suburbs, showed her through the rooms, and told her he belonged to him. To her inquiry how he had obtained it, he finally admitted that it was purchased with a part of $30,000 which he had drawn in a lottery. Being a girl of strict principles, she declared she would never marry him unless he gave back the money, and on his refusing, she left him forever, and the house is still tenanted.

A Buffalo Alderman astonished the board, in a meeting for consideration as to the building of a new jail, by remarking: "I makes der motion as der new jail be build on der same spot as der old jail whar's now standing; dat saves der money for der land, and I makes der motion as der old jail shall not be pulled down til der new jail is built, so ve vill not be mitent der jail."

Consumption—A New Remedy Suggested.

Medical men have known for a long time that the best remedies for consumption were plenty of pure air, sunshine, and exercise, and also food that contained much carbon. Cod-liver oil has been a favorite remedy, and has done good in prolonging the lives of consumptives, and putting off the approach of the grim monster. The virtues of other remedies are in proportion to the amount of carbon they can infuse into the system to feed the consuming flame that wastes the body. The theory is that the internal fever burns up the carbon in the blood faster than the food eaten can replace it. The disease then preys on the fatty substances of the body, and destroys the lungs, and eventually life. In short, there is not oil enough in the lamp for the wick, and the latter is burnt and the light goes out. The Chicago Tribune prints an interesting letter from Dr. D'Unger, of Minneapolis, Minn., on this subject, in which he makes public a prescription which he declares has produced excellent effects, to his personal knowledge. This is his prescription: One-half pound finely-cut up beef-steak (fresh); One drachm pulverized charcoal; Four ounces pulverized sugar; Four ounces rye whiskey; One pint boiling water; Mix all together, let it stand in a cool place over night, and give from one to two spoonfuls liquid and meat—before each meal. I have used this preparation very frequently, and have never found it act otherwise than beneficially. The dose should be small at first, until the stomach becomes used to it, and then gradually increased. This remedy has, at least, the merit of simplicity. Any one can try it.

ABOUT EGGS.—A good egg will sink in water.

A boiled egg which is done will dry quickly on the shell when taken from the kettle.

The boiled eggs which adhere to the shell are fresh laid.

After an egg has laid a day or more the shell comes off easily when boiled. Stale eggs are glossy and smooth of shell.

A fresh egg has a lime-like surface to its shell. Eggs which have been packed in lime look stained and show the action of the lime on the surface.

Eggs packed in bran a long time smell and taste musty.

With the aid of the hands or a piece of paper rolled in funnel shape and held toward the light, the human eye can look through an egg, shell and all.

If the egg is clear and golden in appearance when held to the light, it is good; if dark or spotted it is bad.

The badness of an egg can sometimes be told by shaking it near the holder's ear, but the test is a dangerous one.

Thin shells are caused by lack of gravel, etc., among the hens laying the eggs.

Many devices have been tested to keep eggs fresh, but the less time an egg is kept the better for the egg and the one who eats it.

DISTRIBUTION OF PLANTS.—Prof. Meacham remarks in the Independent that it is one of the most remarkable facts in vegetable physiology that Nature does not put species where they will do best, but evidently where she wants them, quite independently of their wishes and desires, if plants might be supposed to have any. Thus trees which Nature places in swamps do much better when man places them on comparatively dry ground. And we know how remarkably well many plants thrive as weeds in our country, in comparison to what they do in their own lands. A recent illustration of this is a fact recorded of the water-cerries in New Zealand, where it has found a home as an emigrant from Europe. In that country and also in this, to which it has also been introduced, the stems under the most favorable circumstances seldom exceed one's finger in thickness; but in New Zealand the stems grow thicker than one's wrist, and impede seriously the course of rivers and streams. The branches, here seldom more than a foot or so, reach a length of nearly 100 feet.

The ladies of the higher class in Spain are fast ceasing to attend bull fights.

Dr. Peabody recommended some of the Harvard graduates to go to farming for a living.

You can marry your deceased wife's sister in Australia, and so have only one mother-in-law.

The pearl and ruby originally ranked ahead of the diamond in value.

Pets.

Rarely one hears of a lady's attaching herself to such pets as the writer saw at Mrs. Lincoln's, 64 Howard street recently. Living in the family are a couple of lions, twenty-one months old, brought up by the hand of Mrs. Lincoln. They are African lions, a species not easily reared in this country, but Mrs. Lincoln has succeeded, by the exercise of great care in rearing them to their present age and size. The male weighs about 250 pounds, and the female perhaps fifty pounds less. They have been at the house on Howard street since last September, and until a short time ago had the run of the place, going about the rooms with considerable freedom. As a measure of caution, the police thought the creatures should be restrained, and their quarters are now more limited than formerly although they have safe out door run and a room adjoining the kitchen, with only a strong wire door separating the apartments.—Mrs. Lincoln is as free with her pets as ladies are with their poodles. She plays with them, feeds them from her hands, and has taught them various tricks. They will kiss her at her bidding, jump through a hoop, &c. Before the police restrictions were placed upon them, the animals were accustomed to walk into the kitchen or parlor among guests, and go back to their quarters without offering to harm any one. A year ago, the house used to occupy the same corner with the lady at night, but now she has grown full large to be taken upon a common bedstead. The animals are quite a curiosity, and in their gentleness show plainly how potent is the law of kindness, even with the brute creation.—Boston Herald.

Finding a Wife at Church.

Many years ago, a son of a Scotch lord, traveling in this country, happened to spend a Sunday in Stratford, Conn. Finding the hours long and weary, he dropped into the church, and soon became more interested in the face and voice of a beautiful young lady in the choir than the preacher's sermon. The impression made was a permanent one. On inquiry, he found that she belonged to a poor family, but was highly esteemed for her noble personal qualities. He made her acquaintance, which ripened into respect and love.

The young lady was placed under the best educational influences, and afterward taken to Scotland as the wife of the young traveler. Prof. Benjamin Silliman, of Yale College, who was born at Stratford, had often heard the romantic story, but had never learned the name of the Scotch lord. When he visited Scotland, he met one day, at a dinner table, Lord Sterling and his accomplished wife. He was charmed with the courteous manners and the conversational gifts of the lady, which rose to positive pleasure when he found that she was the heroine of the romantic story so often told in his native town. He was proud to know that an American of humble birth was such an illustrious ornament to the Scotch peerage.

DISCOVERY OF A LOST ART.—A method of reproducing the famous, because rare, fire gilded glass of the Egyptians has been recently patented, and from the results attained, it would appear that the inventor, if he has not discovered the ancient process, has devised an excellent substitute. Fire gilded glass is glass in which gold is so worked that many hundreds of years have failed to affect any change, or to tarnish the gold. The trustees of the British Museum, were so pleased with the result of the modern process that they accepted from the inventor, M. D'Hussey, specimens of his recovery of a lost art. The process consists in introducing gold leaf or platinum into the body of the glass, and amalgamating the precious metal with the glass by means of a blowpipe, an operation which also serves to produce a perfectly indestructible covering to the metal and the designs traced. The product so much resembles the ancient work that the method is likely to find a tolerably wide field of usefulness, or, at least, of profit for its inventor.

A. H. Stephens has a strong aversion to pork. He once astonished a new waiter who brought him a plate of sausage cakes by throwing them at him. Baked ocon, however, is said to be a favorite dish with Mr. Stephens, and while he is in Washington several Virginia negroes keep him supplied with this delicacy.

Rev. Mr. Murray says not one hundred in the city gets rich, and but few secure the comforts of life. But not so with an industrious man, who gratifies, as all may—what Mr. Emerson calls "the earth hunger"—the hunger which the Anglo-Saxon, as a race, has for the possession of land; a hunger which is truly honorable.

JOSE BILLINGS' PHILOSOPHY.

The uncertainty of life are just what makes it endurable.

I think I had rather trust my faith than my judgment.

As a general thing the philosophers of the world have spent much of their time eating stewed terrapins, and then telling other phobos how unethically they are.

My friend, if you just give other people the same privileges that you claim for yourself, you will be surprised to see how smooth and still the old maelstrom runs.

It is very easy to explain a defeat. We change it over to the bad luck account.

I have often found it a good plan to cum up on the back side of things and work toward the front; then if we have made a mistake we can back out easier.

I want it distinctly understood, that I am not a philosopher, but a man who has learned the hard way that it is on the back that is on for the heart that is in her.

If there wasn't any phobos this world would be a dreful desolate place to live in; it wouldn't pay to be wise or even cunning.

If it was against the law to guess at things we wouldn't know much.

Whenever I have undertaken to plan a gratuitous amusement for others, I have always failed; the best way is to let everyone pay their munny and then pick out their own game.

Betting on a sure thing is no better than stealing it.

Kind Heaven knows that laziness was the strongest habit of the heart; this makes the plaintive refrain: "Root, hog, or die," sound almost like revelry.

We all or ever to our vanity more than we would like to be told or.

Natur has its devious and winding ways, as well as its strait places; hence I have learned to respect the will in the cat's and the crook in the dog's tale.

The more a man knows the less he doubts; when reason fails he lets faith lead him.

I do not say a live man. The only thing in Satan's karakter that saves him from supreme disgust is, that he is always red-hot.

Silence is the phobos's safety, and the wise man's strength.

We all praise contentment, but none are so quick to it.

The human harte has secrets that it never reveals even to its possessor.

The man who brings about his happiness, and the one who brings about his virtue, are both open to grave suspicions.

There seems to be a growing dislike in the upper circles to have "one's name" mentioned in the newspapers, but thus far it is confined to those who can't get there.

Trying to live on a pedigree is a good deal like trying to fly on dried apples; about the best you can do is to have filled yourself with the apples is to take a drink and set down and swell.

Many smart ones mistake abuse for sarcasm; abuse lands you away below your opponent.

There is but little joy in this world, but there is a heap of management.

Vanity and jealousy also travel together—two selfish kittens.

About one-half that even the wisest man knows is mere theory.

Young man, don't forget this: holding ten dollars on it won't prove a loss for the bull-frog can jump.

I never have had but very few men but what had more capacity than will.

CORK.

Not the city, but the article used to stop small leaks, etc. This valuable substance is nothing more or less than the bark of an evergreen oak, growing principally in Spain and other countries bordering on the Mediterranean. In England it is only a curiosity. When the cork tree is about fifteen years old the bark has attained a thickness and quality suitable for manufacturing purposes; and, after stripping a further growth of eight years produces a second crop; and so on at intervals, for every ten or twelve crops. The bark is stripped from the tree in pieces two inches in thickness, of considerable length, and of such width as to retain the curved form of the trunk when it has been stripped. The bark is peeled or cut with a knife, and the inner surface is made up of a series of small, irregular pieces, which are then pressed down with a knife, and the cork is ready for use.

It is a very important matter, as it is a well-known and undisputed fact that many of the so-called first-class machines which are offered to cheap now-days are those that have been repossessed (that is taken back from customers after use) and rebuilt and put upon the market as new.

THE WHITE IS THE PEER OF ANY SEWING MACHINE NOW ON THE MARKET.

IT IS MUCH LARGER THAN THE FAMILY MACHINES OF THE SINGER, HOWE AND WELLS.

IT COSTS MORE TO MANUFACTURE THAN EITHER OF THE FOREGOING MACHINES.

ITS CONSTRUCTION IS SIMPLE, POSITIVE AND DURABLE.

ITS WORKMANSHIP IS UNSURPASSED.

Do not buy any other before trying the WHITE.

Prices and Terms Made Satisfactory.

MINING LAWS OF SILVER MOUNTAIN MINING DISTRICT.

ARTICLE I.

This District shall be known as the Silver Mountain Mining District.

ARTICLE II.

The boundaries of this District shall be as follows: Commencing at the head of East Carson River, and running down the stream to the line of the Alpine District, thence westerly along the summit of the dividing ridge of mountains between Silver Creek and the Middle Fork of the Carson River to the summit of the mountains to the place of beginning.

ARTICLE III.

Fifteen hundred feet along the ledge and three hundred feet on each side of the middle of the ledge shall constitute a mining claim, located by one or more persons, and they shall also be entitled to all ledges discovered within these boundaries.

ARTICLE IV.

Any permanent resident of the District, holding real estate or mining property, shall be entitled to vote at any miners' meeting.

ARTICLE V.

There shall be a Register elected by a majority of the miners of the District, who shall hold office for one year, and it shall be his duty to record all claims that do not infringe on a former location, and to satisfy himself either by personal inspection or satisfactory proof that they do not so infringe on any other location.

ARTICLE VI.

In case of a vacancy in the office of Register or inability to serve, a meeting for the election of a Register may be held at any time by posting a notice thereof in three public places for three days previous to the meeting, signed by not less than ten residents of the District.

ARTICLE VII.

The Recorder shall be allowed a fee of two dollars and fifty cents for each claim recorded, and in cases where it becomes necessary for him to travel more than one mile, he shall be allowed two dollars additional.

ARTICLE VIII.

After the discovery and location of a ledge or ledge parties shall have ten days allowed in which to record their claims.

ARTICLE IX.

No person shall be eligible to the office of Register who is not a resident of the District, nor shall he be allowed, upon any occasion, to take the District books outside the limits of his town or residence.

ARTICLE X.

It shall be necessary to expend not less than one hundred dollars worth of well-expended labor on each claim, during each year from its location, to hold it.

ARTICLE XI.

The name of the ledge and company shall be posted in a conspicuous place at or near its boundaries.

ARTICLE XII.

There shall be an Annual Meeting held on the first Monday in June of every year to elect officers for the ensuing year. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of all meetings to deliver the minutes of said meetings to the Register who shall preserve the same.

ARTICLE XIII.
